(BBC America) Can the misfits save the world? Has The Watch TV show been cancelled or renewed for a second season on BBC America? The television vulture is watching all the latest cancellation and renewal news, so this page is the place to track the status of The Watch, season two. Bookmark it, or subscribe for the latest updates. Remember, the television vulture is watching your shows. Are you? What's This TV Show About? Airing on the BBC America cable channel, The Watch is inspired by the Discworld novels by Sir Terry Pratchett. The cast includes Richard Dormer, Lara Rossi, Adam Hugill, Marama Corlett, Jo Eaton-Kent, Wendell Pierce, Samuel Adewunmi, Matt Berry, Anna Chancellor, and Bianca Simone Mannie, with James Fleet, Ralph Ineson, Hakeem Kae-Kazim, Paul Kaye, Ruth Madeley, and Ingrid Oliver. Set in the fictional Discworld's principal city of Ankh-Morpork, the story follows an unlikely group of misfits called The City Watch. They are forced to find the courage to save the world and surprise even themselves in the process. The series pits trolls, werewolves, wizards, and other improbable heroes against an evil plot to resurrect a great dragon which would lead to the destruction of life as they know it. Characters include leader Sam Vimes (Dormer); the last scion of nobility, Lady Sybil Ramkin (Rossi); naïve but heroic Constable Carrot (Hugill); mysterious Corporal Angua (Corlett); ingenious forensics expert Constable Cheery (Eaton-Kent); and the voice of Death (Pierce). Season One Ratings The first season of The Watch averaged a 0.04 rating in the 18-49 demographic and 216,000 viewers. Find out how The Watch stacks up against other BBC America TV shows. As of March 23, 2022, The Watch has not been cancelled or renewed for a second season. Stay tuned for further updates. Telly's Take Will BBC America cancel or renew The Watch for season two? It's difficult to know what BBCA and AMC Networks consider to be a success when it comes to viewership. However, given that this show is based on a series of books and they're trying to build the newly launched AMC+ streaming service, I think that it will likely be renewed. I'll update this page with breaking developments. Subscribe for free alerts on The Watch cancellation or renewal news. What do you think? Do you hope The Watch TV show will be renewed for a second season? How would you feel if BBC America cancelled this TV series, instead? BBC America's televised retelling of Terry Pratchett's Discworld book series, The Watch, has received a new release date. The fantasy police procedural is a loose adaptation of Pratchett's novel series, with its lens focused on The Ankh-Morpork City Watch - a fictional police force situated within Pratchett's imaginative universe. BBC America had teased the first look into its forthcoming magnum opus back in January when it released the first images of The Watch's characters, featuring Game of Thrones alum Richard Dormer as the brawny Captain Sam Vimes. It was subsequently revealed that creator Simon Allen had given themselves to rescue their lawless city from an impending disaster. Earlier it was revealed that Adam Hugill, Jo Eaton-Kent, Marama Corlett, Lara Rossi, and Sam Adewunmi would join Dormer in The Watch as Constable Carrot, Constable Cherry, Corporal Angua, Lady Sybil, and Carcer Dun respectively. An early synopsis had also mentioned how their characters would differ from the novel counterparts. Cherry, for instance, is an ingenious non-binary forensics expert instead of a bearded dwarf, while Angua is Carrot's trainer instead of his colleague. The show's recent overview reinforced similar ideas while also detailing a bit more about the show's central premise. According to BBC America, The Watch has been scheduled for a January 2021 release. The exact premiere date, however, has yet to be announced. In The Watch, Terry Pratchett's beloved creatures from his Discworld series - which include trolls, werewolves, wizards, and other outlandish entities - will embark on a quest that is as much a surprise to the heroes as it is to viewers. It will require the City Watch to prevent the resurrection of a powerful dragon who would otherwise orchestrate the doom of their hometown, Ankh-Morpork. Along with announcing a release date, BBC America also released a new image of The Watch's cast. Take a look, below. BBC Studios is developing The Watch alongside Narrativa, Pratchett's own production company. When the show was in its pre-production phase, Pratchett, his daughter Rhianna, and his business manager Rob Wilkins were all attached to the show creatively. After Pratchett's passing, however, the show's progress hit a roadblock and Rhianna and Wilkins also discontinued their association with the project. But in 2018, BBC America ordered an eight-episode series of The Watch and tasked Craig Viveiros with the directional duties. Filming subsequently began in Cape Town with a 2020 release date in mind. The Watch has induced public contempt for not following its source material closely. Rhianna and Wilkins have, in fact, even thrown subdued shade at the project, making references author Ursula LeGuin's take-down of the horrible adaptation of her Earthsea books. Initially, it was the cyberpunk theme that many found infuriating, but as these latest previews reveal, The Watch does not even appear to stay true to the plot of Terry Pratchett's original story. Several essential Discworld members do not appear in The Watch's cast, like Detritus, and of those that do appear look radically different from how Pratchett envisioned them, like Angua with her cropped hair. Dependable performances from stars like Richard Dormer and Anna Chancellor might shore up the project, but otherwise, by straying so far from its source material The Watch risks alienating fans before it even airs. Related Topics TV News The Watch discworld About The Author Syed Fahadullah Hussaini (441 Articles Published) More From Syed Fahadullah Hussaini "The Watch" is a science fiction and fantasy-tinged police procedural series that premiered on BBC America in January 2021. Based on Terry Pratchett's best-selling "Discworld" series of novels, "The Watch" follows a crew of police officers who protect the fantastical city of Ankh-Morpork from all manner of criminals, both human and legendary. "The Watch" isn't a straight adaptation, though, making several bold choices that depart from the books — for starters, the TV series trades in the medieval setting of the books for a more modern punk-rock aesthetic. That may be part of the reason why the first season of "The Watch" wasn't a runaway hit: it currently has a critics' score of just 56% on Rotten Tomatoes, while the audience score is an even more paltry 36%. For some fans of the book series, the show's new look was just too much of a leap. But it's still a unique show with tons of source material and a devoted fan base, even if some aren't entirely happy with this adaptation. Here's everything we know so far about a possible renewal of "The Watch." At this point, the BBC hasn't yet announced whether "The Watch" has been renewed for a second season, so it's still much too early for a release date to be available. Production on season 1 began in late October 2019 (via Bleeding Cool), and the first season premiered on BBC America on January 3, 2021. That puts about a year between the start of production and when the show is available — and that was during the coronavirus pandemic. So, if the BBC did renew The Watch, the earliest it would be available would be about a year later. For what it's worth, Jo Eaton-Kent, who plays Cheery, still thinks there's plenty of material for a second season and more. "I honestly believe that a Season 2 is on the horizon because there are so many unanswered questions," she told Collider. "Earlier, while I was making breakfast, I was thinking, "Hang on, that question never really got answered, did it?" And that's something that everybody else is going to be feeling. It's not because they forgot to talk about it. It's all intentional." If "The Watch" does return for a second season, that means the main cast will most likely return as well. "The Watch" follows the members of the Ankh-Morpork City Watch, who have to protect their town from all manner of fantasy creatures. The cast includes Richard Dormer as the head of the unit, Captain Sam Vimes; Jo Eaton-Kent as Constable Cheery Littlebottom, the unit's forensics officer; Adam Hugill as Constable Carrot Ironfounderson, the newest member of the City Watch; Marama Corlett as Corporal Angua; and Ralph Ineson as the voice of Sergeant Detritus. The other supporting cast members who will most likely to return are Anna Chancellor as Lord Havelock Vetinari, the ruler of Ankh-Morpork; James Fleet as the arch-chancellor of Unseen University, Ankh-Morpork's wizardry school; Wendell Pierce as the voice of Death; and Lara Rossi as Sam's wife, Lady Sybil Ramkin. Based on where the show left things at the end of Season 1, the biggest development heading into Season 2 is Sam Vimes' discovery of the Observers' realm, an area stuck out of time where it's possible to be transported into nearly any alternate reality. As star Adam Hugill put it in an interview with The Wrap, "Who knows what could happen, really? Because the whole point of the Observers' realm and the people that Vimes has been transported into, they could choose any multiverse they want and they could throw him back into a multiverse where he would have to exist as well. So God knows where you might end up finding him in a potential further-down-the-line story. Who knows where they throw him back into?" The other major developments in the Season 1 finale are the villain Carcer Dun framing The Watch member Lupin Wonse for summoning the dragon that threatened Ankh-Morpork; and The Watch members Angua and Carrot finally confessed their feelings for each other, but didn't yet pursue a relationship. If Season 2 does happen, everybody involved will have plenty to work with.
